

Facial Recognition

A picture of your face is captured by a photo or video

The facial recognition software analyzes your face. And identifies keys features.

The software sends back an output to the user. This output could be that your face matches or doesn't match

The key features and the scanned face are then compared to a database of faces. It looks through this database trying to find a matching face